RANDOLPH J. HAINES
U.S. Bankruptcy Judge

IN THE UNITED STATES BANKRUPTCY COURT
FOR THE DISTRICT OF ARIZONA

In re ) Chapter 7
ROBERTO ESTRADA, )
Debtor. ) CASE NO. 2-04-20986-RJH
MEMORANDUM DECISION OVERRULING
TRUSTEE'S OBJECTION TO HOMESTEAD
EXEMPTION

The Trustee has objected to the Debtor's claim of exemption for a triplex in which the Debtor occupies only one of the three units. The Trustee seeks to limit the Debtor's exemption to the unit he occupies and, if successful, would sell the entire building and divide the proceeds with the Debtor based upon square footage, as was done in In re Tsoupas, 250 B.R. 466 (Bankr. D. N.H. 2000).

The Trustee's objection in effect assumes that the Arizona homestead is limited to the Debtor's dwelling. In fact, however, A.R.S. § 33-1101(a)(1) defines the homestead as the debtor's "interest in real property in one compact body upon which exists a dwelling house in which the person resides." Thus while the land must contain a dwelling house, the exemption is in the land, not in the dwelling house.

In addition to requiring the dwelling house in which the debtor resides, the statute imposes only two additional requirements on the nature of the land holding that may qualify for the homestead: (1) the land must be "in one compact body," and (2) the debtor's interest in the land may not exceed $150,000 in value. An issue may arise as to whether the land is "in one compact body" when it consists of more than one subdivided lot, as this Court addressed in In re Allman, 286 B.R. 402 (Bankr. D. Ariz. 2002). There is no such dispute here,

1 however, where the land consists of a single subdivided lot and a single building. On these
2 facts, the Trustee cannot really argue that the land is not “in one compact body,” and does not
3 advance any argument to that effect.

4 Because the land is in one compact body and the Debtor’s interest does not
5 exceed the current homestead amount of $150,000, there is no basis in the statute to deny the 6 Debtor’s claim of exemption as to the entire building. There is no statutory requirement that the 7 Debtor live in all of the property claimed as a homestead, nor is there any prohibition against the 8 Debtor earning an income from some portion of the homestead property.

9 Instead of analyzing or even citing this Court’s analysis in Allman, supra, the 10 Trustee relies on cases decided in New Hampshire<sup>1</sup> and Florida.<sup>2</sup> Those cases are 11 distinguishable, however. The Florida homestead provision at issue in Wierschem specifically 12 provides that a homestead in a municipality “shall be limited to the residence of the owner or his 13 family.” 152 B.R. at 347. Not only does Arizona statute lack any such limitation to “the 14 residence”, but it expressly provides that the homestead consists of the entire compact body of 15 real property on which the dwelling house exists. Similarly, although New Hampshire lacks a
16 statutory definition of its homestead, earlier decisions had limited the homestead to “the family 17 ‘house’ or ‘home’ as commonly understood,” which therefore excluded portions of adjacent 18 property that could not be considered part of the house or home or “necessary to the convenient
19 enjoyment of the house.”<sup>3</sup> Again, Arizona’s homestead definition is not so limited to the 20 dwelling house, but rather extends to all of the compact body of real property on which the 21 dwelling house exists.

22 For these reasons, the Trustee’s objection to the Debtor’s claim of homestead are 23 overruled.

25 <sup>1</sup>In re Tsoupas, 250 B.R. 466 (Bankr. D. N.H. 2000).

26 <sup>2</sup>In re Wierschem, 152 B.R. 345 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 1993); In re Aliotta, 68 B.R. 281 (Bankr.
27 M.D. Fla. 1986).

28 <sup>3</sup>In re Mirulla, 163 B.R. 910, 911 (Bankr. D. N.H. 1994), citing Libbey v. Davis, 68 N.H. 355, 34a 744 (1895) and Hoitt v. Webb, 36 N.H. 158 (1858).

1 At oral argument, the parties also addressed the rents arising from the rental
2 units. The Court declines to address that issue because it is not presently before the Court. It
3 does not appear that the Debtor claimed an exemption as to the rental income, and the Trustee
4 did not object to any such claimed exemption.
